

This activity guide is designed as a simple and engaging resource to complement your teaching and spark creativity in young learners. It includes images that can be used for various self-expression activities, such as cutting stencils, exploring bubble letters and wild-style block letters, and creating personalized "Hello, My Name Is" stickers. The goal is to provide a positive outlet for artistic expression, empowering kids to discover ways to communicate their individuality.

Importantly, these activities are not intended to promote vandalism but to inspire parents and teachers to guide children to explore their creativity constructively and meaningfully.

Stencils & "Spray Painting"

A lot of street art these days is created with stencils and spray cans. I decided the best way to "have a go", was to use some stencils we were given a while back. Both children find drawing around the stencil with a pencil hard work (and a little frustrating), so this was the ideal opportunity to use them differently.
